COST $75 TO TRAIN FOR MOVIE BEAUTY

A number of middle aged scrubwomen of Brooklyn, to say nothing of stenogra-phers, shop girls and others of the sex, are being trained for the movies at private instruction schools through the lure of advertisements representing that most features can be massaged, blocked or rolled into beauty by a course of lessons at $75 the course. The District Attorney of Kings county visited one of these schools, so it was reported yesterday, and was so dismayed at the possible future of filmdom that he ordered an leasting atom. investigation.

It was revealed, he said, that the amthe full $75 course by the ruse of being put through a beauty tryout, for which they pay $2. Has Excellent Role for Miss Anglin

Miss Margaret Angin returned to the sence of two years. She was seen at the Frazes Theatre, which is not a new playhouse, but the little theatre in West Forty-second street which has variously known as the Lew Fields, the Hackett and the Harris. She brought back "The Woman of Bronze," a new play which evidently had been the object of her search during the months of her absence. The work is from the pen of Henri Kistemascher but the English version is by Paul Kes-ter, who has placed the action in a suburban town near New York and changed the externals of the work if he has not succeeded in adapting its essentially Gallic nature to our own life. After all it is not only French hus bands who cast their eyes from their mature spouses to the alim and youthful cuties who are responsible for so much of the agitation about the family to excuse his weakness. Miss Anglin naturally played the given in celebration of the independence and filled with eloquent byplay. It day of Brazil, Sept. 7. ance that did more than anything else Paul Kester's adaptation was far su-perior to the average of such work. It was usually in good English and ineptly literary only at intervals. The general representation was most capable. John Halliday played well the hateful role of the husband and as the youthful size.
